LUTHERANS KEPT REFORMATION DAY

ENGLISH LUTHERAN CHURCH OB-SERVED OCCASION WITH SPECIAL SERVICES.

11 NEW MEMBERS RECEIVED

Into the Church at Morning Services
—Rev. Christy Delivered Fine and Helpful Sermon.

Yesterday was celebrated as Reformation Day among the Lutheran churches and special services in honor of the occasion were held. At the morning service of St. Peter's English Lutheran church there was a special Reformation Day sermon and the evening services were conducted by the Sunday school children with appropriate exercises.

Eleven new members were received into the church Sunday morning. They were as follows: Miss Clara Ludolph, the Misses Marie and Elizabeth Weber, Miss Marie Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Wolfgang, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Mahmburg, Mrs. Fred Schmalke, Arthur Crescent and Edward Crescent.

Comparing Christianity to a flowing stream, Rev. Christy, in his morning sermon, pointed out a number of things which defiled the purity of it, hindered its progress and caused it to lose its power. These impurities, and hindrances, he said, it was the duty of the people of the church to remove.

"The text was taken from the second chapter of the Gospel of John, the fifteenth verse: 'And when he made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep and the oxen, and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables.'"

"Extending through the very heart of our land, from the northern states down to the Gulf of Mexico, and with tributaries extending from Western Pennsylvania to the mountains in the extreme west, flows a great river. This mighty stream is the Mississippi, which finds its source in beautiful Lake Itasca in northern Minnesota. This great stream was placed there by God as a means of drainage and navigation for the men who were to settle in its valley.

"As it trickles from its source the water of the stream is pure, but as it flows through the land and its tributaries are emptied into it, it gathers deposits which defile its purity and make it muddy. Then as it goes on farther, hindrances oppose its progress and it no longer flows swiftly, but is spread out over the land.

"Like that great body of water, so does the stream of Christianity flow from its beginning thousands of years ago down to the present time. It started in the teaching of Christ and his overthrowing the seats of corruption. Alas, however, have allowed its pure stream to become defiled. 'As we come down through the ages we find some that have cleansed the waters of Christianity and removed the obstacles that have obstructed its progress. On this Reformation Day we celebrate the greatest event that ever occurred in the Christian church, the Reformation brought about by Martin Luther.

"So now there is something to be done. We see hindrances and great obstacles in the way of Christianity and it is again time for a Reformation—for another dredging out of the stream of Christianity.

"We see some of the tendencies of the day in the feeble efforts of men to cleanse the stream. We see men who, loving their fellow creatures, band themselves together to clear away the obstacles, to fight the traffic which condemns thousands of young women to eternal ruin. We also see great men, such as Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver, endeavoring to bring about better civil conditions, a better prosecution of law in securing the suppression of crime. There are the organizations for the betterment of the laboring classes.

"There is the Laymen's Missionary Movement which stands forth in its efforts to increase the means and forces of the mission realm. Men are not merely content with the flimsy creeds which they created.

"It is not sufficient to patch a spot here and dredge another there. The work of clearing up must be begun at the source and continued to the mouth. There are many things hindering the stream of the Gospel. Religion is not a dead issue among the American people. Religion is a very live issue and a potent factor in all good works. It may be rapidly developed, but this mighty, God-created stream can no more be ignored or swept aside by man than can the great river which flows into the Gulf.

"The things which stood in the way of progress in the early days are not those which we find today. The hindrances we find today are the ideas in general in regard to Christianity, the indifference to things divinely constituted. There is the idea that the possession of sacred things atones for our ignorance of them. The Bible is not appreciated, nor read, nor prayed over now as when it was more difficult to procure.

"When a man had to go a long way to secure a copy of the Holy Bible, they learned whole passages. How many know half a dozen statements from the Bible which they could quote if the occasion arose? The possession of the Holy Scriptures does not atone for the ignorance of it.

"Another great and abundant idea that needs to be driven out is that salvation can be secured on claims of respectability. Read what God says about it and then weigh on your unprejudiced mind whether or not you will be saved because of respectability. The belief that salvation can be secured on respectability is one of the strongest arguments of the devil. There are men who believe that because they are honest, respectable, and moral six days in the week, that they can go hunting and play golf on the seventh day, and that because of their respectability God is going to take them to Himself and say, 'Well done.'

"The belief that we want to be Christians outside of the church is another notion that should be put aside. Christianity outside the church is a spiritual impossibility. It is a divine paradox. What we need is a revision of our definition of a Christian. A Christian is not one who tries to keep the commandments of God. A Christian is one who knows that he has not kept them and that Christ is the one who has the power and on whom he must rely for help.

"Another harmful thought is that our obligations are fulfilled when we pay our share of the expenses of the church. God has not constituted his creatures alike in any respect. He has not laid duties on the children all in the same degree. Our obligation is exactly in proportion to the need as presented to us.

"There are two things that enter into the accumulation of a fortune. The first is to get as much out of life and your fellow men as you can. The second is to still retain into it as possible and still retain what you already have. It is in this selfish relation that we expect the great things of God to be carried on with the most meagre stipend. There is nothing worth having that does not cost a great deal. If the church is the greatest thing in the world, it is going to cost each of us who are to receive its blessings a great sacrifice. In proportion as we give into it, will we receive blessings from the Father.

"Many people think that because of any slight thing which displeases them they may sever their connections with that church and change their relation. They cast it off as one would an old garment. Only on the ground that the church has violated its greatest obligation have the right to sever my connections with it.

"An idea is prevalent that the church is as a vineyard producing wine for man's joy and comfort, but which requires no attention, investment nor outlay of labor. It is considered as a place one may come and receive but which needs nothing in return. Have we blamed Christ because the church has not assumed the proportions that it should. Why is it so? Because our conception of the church is that it is a place from which we must draw and receive. There is little conception that it is a great field of training, a workshop in which we are laborers.

"The Lutheran church has a great mission before it to help clear out the deposits that have clogged the Gospel stream. We must make a bold stand for the right. We may be despised, but if God is with us, who can be against us? Labor to do what he has charged us to do."

WHAT THE LAW WILL DO FOR THIS CITY

City Attorney Maxfield Writes on the Rule by Commission Form of Government.

To the Editor:
Having received numerous inquiries as to the commission form of city government from various sources, and realizing the importance of a fair, just, economical and business municipal government, with various interests and political influences removed as far as possible and one that serves the best interests of the taxpayers and without weighing in any way to dictate to the people of the city and without expressing any preference for any form, I will gladly contribute a few brief articles to your valuable paper on this form of municipal government and the Wisconsin law.

No branch of our popular form of government is more important to the people than that which controls their local municipal affairs, and as our form of government is a government of the people, for the people and by the people, it behooves "the people" to closely scrutinize each form, and select the one which will best serve their interests.

The commission form of city government is the twentieth century business man's idea of the management of local municipal affairs, not that it was unknown prior to the twentieth century, but that the progressive man of the present day is adopting it as a means of securing for himself and his posterity a more perfect and economical form of democratic government, one that is as near perfect from a business viewpoint as is possible for the human mind to create, as this is a business man's government, and not a politician's. I express no own conditions, and to be successful it must have the power to deal promptly in a business manner with all difficulties and needs of life. This form of municipal government first came into prominence after the Galveston flood, when a coterie of businessmen took entire charge of the management of city affairs, rebuilding the city which had practically been paralyzed and destroyed by the disaster; the people of Galveston were so well pleased with the management of city affairs that an application was made to the legislature of Texas for a charter under which Galveston might continue this form of government. Other cities which wished to profit by Galveston's success secured the passage of a similar law by their respective legislatures, and in each and every instance, if the reports received from these cities and their citizens were correct, they are more successful in the management of their city affairs than under the old form of city government, for according to these reports they are giving the people more and better improvements for less money and promptly adjusting all complaints without delay.

Chapter 448, laws of 1909, was passed at the last meeting of the legislature, which provides for the reorganizing of cities under the commission form of government in Wisconsin, which will be the subject of my next article.

Of the four, Rooney has been firing the Mineral Point passenger with Engineer Fox, Hillmeyer has been with Engineer Doe, Knudling until lately with Engineer Walkington, and Cox has been on the new line.

Fireman Genth took Engineer Bush's place on 173 this morning with Engineer Dawes.

Engineer Higgins, and Barker, took out an extra east on the C. & M. division this morning at 11:15 with engine 1752 and 1256.

Rails and ties were torn up from Madison to Chicago on the St. Paul were held up. Passengers on the Milwaukee train, due in Janesville at 9:15, were kept on the train until midnight.

BRAKEMAN CHAS. CANTWELL RECOVERING FROM INJURY

Brakeman Charles Cantwell is able to be about today after being confined to his home since last Wednesday by a badly burned eye. The accident occurred last Wednesday night while he was on 588 at Sharon. While working on the train, a hot cinder blew into his right eye, burning the eyeball severely. Although the injury was very painful, he managed to finish the trip after a temporary dressing had been applied. Upon arriving in Janesville, it was found that the burn was more serious than was at first expected, but at present it is thought that his eyesight will not be affected.

Switchehan Atkins, who fired out of Janesville for a short time, has given up his position.

It is reported that a car of coke on 322 caught fire at Koshkonong yesterday and that it was allowed to burn out on a side-track.

DISCUSS PROSPECTS FOR NEXT SATURDAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 31.—Tom Barry and Dr. Charles McCarthy, head of the University of Wisconsin football team and his first assistant, rode down from Minneapolis after the Minnesota-Chicago game and talked it all over, facing the problem of whipping the undeveloped Badgers into such shape as to dispose of both Minnesota and Chicago in two of the greatest football battles the west may ever hope to entertain.

Minnesota, having tasted the first victory several from Chicago for now these several seasons is in the disposition to batter down all show of opposition that may be presented here two weeks hence, then whip Michigan and declare an undisputed championship of the west, the glory of which will be enhanced by the Michigan whipping administered to Syracuse. Wisconsin has had little scrimmage work this year.

Now it will come in big bunches, for Dr. McCarthy is a great adherent of the doctrine of strenuous work. He is fresh from Japan, returning having had on his way home the stimulant of seeing Minnesota whip Chicago.

Hard work will begin Tuesday, after just enough of pause to recover from the hard bruises received in the fight with Northwestern, and also giving the coaches time to figure out some program. Generally speaking the program will be to coach the freshmen and second eleven players in the Minnesota style and use them in perfecting the attack and defense of the varsity.

Particular efforts will be directed toward the management of Captain

McGovern, no stock being taken in the press dispatches that the Minnesota captain and drop-kicker is out of the game with a broken collar bone. While what little hope remains here is more of desperation than genuine belief in the ability of the Badgers to best Minnesota. It is nevertheless declared that Wisconsin's line is better than that of Chicago and about the equal of that of the Gophers, so that Wisconsin may be expected to hold Minnesota's attack on line and tackle assaults, and also resist breaking through long enough to enable the fast Wisconsin backs to get their plays in operation.

It is believed that with this advantage over Chicago, Wisconsin will be able to make the forward pass work to advantage where Chicago failed. Another hopeful sign is the fact that Sid Anderson seems to have arrived. He was touted as the greatest running back in the west, but proved a great disappointment until the Northwestern game, when he made a star showing at left end.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

William R. Horst is making his campaign for mayor of New York, on the public ownership platform. Speaking in Brooklyn last Friday, Mr. Horst said:

"Municipal ownership means better service, cheaper fares, increased wages for employees and increased comfort for the public. It means, too, profits for the government, and that means lower taxes for the people."

The Wall Street Journal, in commenting, says:

"Here are six statements of which one is demonstrably true and five are untrue. On our single experiment, the Staten Island and 39th Street ferries, municipal ownership has meant no better service, fares at the old rate, expensive boats, which are not kept decently clean, although they are the newest boats in the harbor, an annual loss of upwards of $1,000,000 on what a Wall Street syndicate would operate for nothing and make a large profit, and increased taxes for all citizens of New York."

"The one true clause in Mr. Horst's statement is the increased wages for the employees. Not only are the employees paid more than their services are worth in any private enterprise, but there are more of them. To operate a Pennsylvania or a Lackawanna ferryboat for twenty-four hours requires seventeen men. Remember that all these men are unionized and are decently paid by two companies on the best of terms with their employees. To operate a Staten Island ferryboat for twenty-four hours requires fifty-one men, or just three times as many. If anyone has observed the method of collecting the return fare from that large number of people who make the round trip for the sake of fresh air on a summer evening, by employees freed from the humiliating badge of a bell-punch, he will guess where some of the earnings go. The taxation of Staten Island, in fact, does not pay for its means of communication with New York."

The ferryboats referred to cost the city $2,500,000. They have never paid expense and never will under city ownership. The principle is wrong whether in New York or anywhere else."

WHEN WE FLY
An enthusiastic admirer of aeroplanes said the other day, "In ten years flying machines will be as common as automobiles and a good deal cheaper." He was a physician and his thought was that the new vehicle would be a God-send to the profession, not so much in repairing broken legs and arms as in being able to light in the back yard with no thought of the restless horse outside or the machine that refused to crank.

Thus it may be, for the age of skepticism is rapidly giving place to the age of belief and doubt in the realm of science is disappearing. The discoveries and inventions of the last decade have alienated skepticism and people are waiting for what seems the impossible to develop at every corner.

Wilbur Wright thus describes the reputation of flying in the November Review of Reviews:

"Flying is the greatest sport in the world," says Mr. Wilbur Wright's comment. The question as to his personal experience aroused him from his habitual reserve. "I can't describe the sensation," he continued; "I can only define it by comparison with more familiar experiences. It is like sledding, like motoring, like sailing, but with increased exhilaration and freedom. "An aeroplane flight, contrary to the general impression, is far steadier than the familiar means of locomotion. There is absolute freedom from the bounding of the automobile, the jar of a railroad train, or the rolling and pitching sensations of the sea. No matter how many springs or cushions may be added to an automobile, for instance, there will always be some motion.

"On the other hand, the seat of an aeroplane does not jolt over the inevitable wind currents, the ruts of the sky. It cuts its way smoothly. Even suppose the plane to be gliding so (inducement an angle of forty-five degrees), the seat remains fixed. There is, of course, no absolute parallel in surface travel. And since there is no roll or pitch to the aeroplane, there is no air-sickness comparable to the familiar sea-sickness."

All aviators seem unconscious of any element of danger. Even among the passengers no one has confessed even to nervousness during the flights. Once aloft the exhilaration of the exercise banishes every fear. Mr. Wilbur Wright has flown with many passengers both here and abroad.

"After the first flight one has no thought of possible accident," Mr. Wright explained. "In all my flights I have never known a passenger to be frightened. One of my passengers, I remember, was greatly disturbed for fear that, in our downward drive, we would hit a man who happened to be in the way; but he was a beginner and did not understand the control of the machine. One soon becomes accustomed to the levers and finds plenty of time to look about and enjoy the flight."

THE FARMER'S PROSPERITY

"The farmer's prosperity is expressed by his automobile. At a recent country educational meeting down the state 250 automobiles were in line. Possibly the farmers buy better machines than they need but there is no doubt in their minds that they are entitled to them as a modern necessity for the elimination of time and distance. The automobile is more of a success in the country than in the city. The country has been waiting for this invention for many years, and now that it has it the farmers are becoming mechanics."

The farmers referred to in the paragraph were Ohio farmers, but other western states are equally well represented, and the fact is generally recognized that no class of people, outside the millionaire class, can better afford automobiles than the well-to-do farmer.

While many men in moderate circumstances buy them, much of the capital invested is borrowed and it frequently happens that the home is mortgaged to raise the money.

It is gratifying to know that the farmers in all parts of the country continue to be prosperous, and that they are disposed to invest some of their surplus in the luxuries of life.

The automobile on the farm will furnish another incentive for good roads, and will also silence much of the criticism and prejudice against the new vehicle.

The auto has come to stay and the output for 1910 is estimated at more than 200,000. This means employment for a great army of skilled workmen at good wages, and it also means a steady customer for the home market, in which every farmer as well as every man in business is interested.

The reciprocity of trade relations at home takes care of itself without the aid of legislation, and when every industry is prosperous the distribution of wealth is so equitable, that there is no cause for complaint.

The Janesville Street railway continues to bump along with old-time regularity, and people continue to wonder how long the fare will be carried on. Long-time franchisees may be a good thing for public utility corporations, but the service rendered is frequently out of all proportion to the concessions granted. The street railway should sell out or stock up with new equipment.

The immense apple crop in the west has created a shortage of cars and the growers are having trouble in marketing their fruit. The demand for cars in the wheat belt is also largely in excess of the supply. It is refreshing to know that every wheel is turning, for this is the keynote of general prosperity.

The Vanderbilt cup race on the Long Island course last Saturday was so poorly managed that much dissatisfaction resulted. The timekeepers found it difficult to keep track of the machines, as many of them passed the grandstand at an 80-mile clip. The winner made the 278 miles in 4 hours and 25 minutes, averaging 62 miles an hour.

PRESS COMMENT.
A Clever Speech.
Punch tells the following: Fisherman (chattering pensioner): "They tell me, Kony, that all your old-age pension goes in drink." Kony: "No man, not a penny of my pension am I spending on the drink." Fisherman: "Where do you get the money for whiskey, then?" Kony: "Just from real gentlemen like yourself."

Well, Well, Well!
The Baltimore American comments: "Every wife ought to know how to make good bread." "How can she unless the husband furnishes the dough?"

True Riches.
Puck remarks: "They're rich?" "Millions." "Oh? What's that?" "Well, so rich that she can dress as well as she likes, but not so rich that she can dress as badly as she likes."

Or Be Behind a Wheel.
The Louisville Courier-Journal says: "It is annoying to wait for a train that's late." "Yes; and it is even more annoying to wait for a train that was discontinued the week before."

Poor Johnny!
Chicago Tribune: "Johnny, did you have a good vacation at that little lake resort?" "No, sir. Maw wouldn't let me go swimming, and she made me take a cold bath every mornin'."

Must Be Thankful.
The Washington Star notes that "The terrible quietude at the north pole must be hard to endure." "Yes," answered the New Yorker. "But that explorer had a great deal of valuable discipline. He used to live in Brooklyn."

All Want Offices.
The Madisonian is bitter. It says: "Of course the warring halfbreeds should 'get together.' Only 55 per cent of them wants to be secretary of state, state treasurer, insurance commissioner, lieutenant governor or attorney general, and if they can't have any of these offices, then a large number will be abundantly satisfied with deputy game warden. To advise the coming together of such a conglomeration of conflicting ambitions is little less than a crime. And yet such advice is being given with reckless indifference to consequences."

Poor Spain!
The Elkhorn Independent's editor writes that other headily judging editors find in the cruel gloom of Alfonso the foolish new hope of a freer hour for Spain. Catalonia is least Spanish of the provinces, and the Barcelonense are more European than Catalonian. Ferrer's blood might be the seed of a republic if Barcelona were Spain; but riot, insurrection and civil war never reach the dignity of permanent revolution throughout the kingdom. Spanish ultra-conservatism may change—when all else on earth has changed—but even then not in the twinkling of an eye. Political regeneration is a growth, not an outbreak.

Not Uncle Joe.
The Oskosh Northwestern does not know "Uncle Joe" or it would not say "It is hinted that an effort will be made to persuade 'Uncle Joe' Cannon to decline another nomination to congress and that it will be impressed on him that even if he is re-elected he cannot hope to again be chosen as speaker." The chances are, however, that "Uncle Joe" will stand up to the rack and die fighting."

Always Ready.
Radio Journal: Senator La Follette is determined not to wait until the Central bank is built to begin the work of demobilizing it. And he isn't a bit careful about touching off his dynamite cartridges without warning anybody.

Uncle Walt
THE POET PHILOSOPHER
BY WALT MASON
(Copyright, 1909, by George Mathew Adams.)

Booth Tarkington has made it known that he'll let authorship alone; no more within his ONE AUTHOR private den he'll QUITs wrestle with his fountain pen, producing novels by the mile, dictating dramas all the while. Down on the farm he'll plant his vine and figtree and raise spotted swine, and tail red calves with crooked legs, and mules and hogs and hard boiled eggs. And if a publisher should trade him to his quiet, rural vale, and cry: "Booth, drop your grunge-book, and take your pen, and write a book," he'll smile the answer on the head and plant him by the cultivated shed. No more for him the printed page, the reader's praise, or critic's rage; serene and calm among his cows, and far from all the Lolly Browns, a sturdy yeoman, he will toll, and paralyze the fertile soil. And though it gives us all a pain to think he'll never write again, that never from his pen will come a "Gentleman from Hoosierland," we'll find some little comfort yet if this example that he's set will lead more authors to forswear their pens and seek the open air—best seller authors, let us say, who write a novel every day!

"Mint Julep"
"Mint Julep," by Martha Jones, is the title of a new book just out which promises to be one of the best holiday sellers. It is a story of New England life quaintly told. Mint Julep, the heroine, is a woman of the Samanthe Allen type, the mother of five children, and a widow. She marries William Julep, a young man noted for silence, but Mint soon demonstrates her ability to talk for the family. The story covers a period of six months in which the home life of the Juleps is humorously portrayed. William Julep was away from home most of the time and the book contains many letters to "Dear William" from Mint. One of them gives an account of her first auto ride which contains this passage: "I can only say that no bird that ever flew the azure felt so light and giddy as we, all at once I realized that the shover was crazy. A sudden attack of dizziness or something equally bad had got him, cramping his limbs and made him lurch up to look like a demon. He was trying to get to hell William, an he most succeeded. I yelled and hollered at him, but 'twas no use 'n' when I got winded from screaming, I made the awful discovery that his eyes was shut, he was asleep William. 'O Gawd, asleep at the switch.'"

The book abounds in these unique descriptions, and is a good antidote for dyspepsia. Sutherland & Son are exclusive agents for Janesville.

Dying by Halves.
By falling from a cart, a Chinaman, whose life was insured for a large amount, was seriously hurt. There was some doubt as to his ever getting better, and at length one of his friends wrote to the insurance company: "Hong Wang Lee half dead; lhou half moray."—Tribune.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A MODERN SIDNEY.
Samuel Rush died in a ditch. But he died a royal death just the same.

Rush was the engineer of a fast train on the Southern road. With no fault of his own his engine went down in a wreck near Knoxville.

The engineer, who stayed by his engine, was caught under the machine. He was barely able to crawl out of the tangle, dragging his mangled body. Passengers ran to help him, but he waived them aside, saying:

"Don't mind me. Go and look after the passengers."

Being assured that none of the passengers was injured, he said, "That's good."

Whiskey was offered to him as a stimulant until the surgeons could come. Rush was dying, and he knew it. He was suffering great agony. Nevertheless before he would touch the liquor he called four men close to him as he lay in the ditch beside the track.

"Before I touch this whiskey I want you to smell of my breath and testify if necessary that I was not drinking when this wreck happened."

They complied with his request. Then he took the stimulant.

He died in a few minutes—died without a stain on his record of thirty years as an engineer.

Is there anything finer anywhere than the dying moments of Sam Rush, engineer?

Philip Sidney, dying on the battlefield of Zutphen, waved aside the cup of water, saying: "Give it to that wounded soldier. His need is greater than mine." And the memory of his sacrifice is a sweet savor in the annals of heroism.

Sam, Rush did no less.

"Don't mind me. Go and look after the passengers," said this modern Sidney.

And upon him was no fervor of the battle. There were no flaming flags or throbbing drums. Instead, over him was his ruined engine, in his ears the hiss of steam; agony tortured every nerve of his wounded, burned, bruised body.

Put yourself in his place.

At such a time, in such a place, would your first thought have been of the passengers?

And your second thought of your reputation and record as a sober, careful man?

And the last thought of your broken, wounded body?

Sam Rush died happily.

What mattered himself if the men and women and children were safe? Himself? Why, these four men would testify at the day of judgment, if need be, that he died sober and in the line of duty.

May be appointed United States senator to succeed the late Senator Johnson of South Dakota.

Fargo, N. D.—Col. John D. Benton of Fargo is one of the men discussed for appointment as United States senator to serve till the next legislative session, which will be held in January, 1911, to succeed the late Senator Johnson.

Colonel Benton is a pioneer resident of this section, coming to the Dakota territory in 1878. During his 31 years' residence he has been an active political factor and in 1892 came within one vote of being elected United States senator at the time W. N. Rauch, North Dakota's first and only democratic senator was sent to the higher branch of congress.

Colonel Benton was born in Cortland county, New York, April 2, 1812. He graduated from the Cortland academy and the Albany law school. He was admitted to practice law in New York state and in Dakota territory. For many years he was actively engaged in legal practice in Fargo and at one time had a branch office at Deadwood.

He was a law partner of former United States Judge, Thomas, also of C. W. Amidon, who is now United States Judge.

Colonel Benton was a strong personal friend of late Grover Cleveland and gold Democrat and stamped the state in advocacy of his views. He was president of one of Fargo's banks for six years and has large land interests in North Dakota. He is a forceful orator.

Gov. Marshall of Indiana a Democratic Presidential Possibility for 1912.
BY FRED FISHER.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Thomas R. Marshall an obscure country lawyer of Columbia City, Ind., a town of 2,000, made it his mind to become a governor of Indiana. He entered the fight for the nominations without money, friends or political experience.

The Democracy of the state was split into two factions. Under the whip of the bosses, hundreds of staunch partisans had joined the ranks of the Republicans. At the previous election Roosevelt carried the state by 90,000 and J. Frank Hanley was elected by 84,000. T. Marshall is governor.

His dramatic rise to politics has made him a national figure. He has been offered the senatorial nomination by party leaders and urged to make the race against Albert J. Beveridge next year. His friends and the press mention him constantly as a possibility for the presidential nomination in 1912.

When seen at his office and asked as to his aspirations for higher office his characteristic reply was:

"Wait until I see whether or not I am a good governor."

There is a constant stream of callers at the executive office at Indianapolis and nearly every visitor has something to say about his being a candidate for United States senator or president. He acknowledges the compliments gracefully, but gives all to understand that he is busy being governor at this time.

Then he professes his entire eagerness if the visitor happens to be a newspaper man the chief executive lifts his foot to the top of the desk and settles down for a long social chat regardless of the pressing nature of the state's business. He answers all questions without reserve. He is the plain honest country lawyer with an abiding faith in humanity, especially newspaper men. The appointment of Mark Thistlewaite, a reporter, as his private secretary was one of his characteristic moves. No sooner had he been inaugurated than the bosses began to call, demanding appointments. In every instance Marshall has turned down the party machine to favor personal friends or men of merit.

Thomas R. Marshall comes of an old Virginia family. He was born at North Manchester, Ind., educated at Wabash college and admitted to the bar at 21. He formed a partnership with W. McSweeney, who was congressman from the Twelfth district. The story of his career at the bar covers 31 years of successful practice. He never lost a case. He has always refused to take a case which might result in inflicting the death penalty. Thirteen years ago he married Lois Kinsey, a northern Indiana girl, and since his marriage they have never been separated a single day. They have no children.

To Mrs. Marshall the governor attributes his success in politics. She was with him constantly during his campaigning and proved to be an efficient vote getter. The story of his nomination and subsequent election forms one of the most interesting chapters in the history of Indiana politics. When he entered the field for the nomination there were two candidates of unusual strength in the race, L. B. Shack, a senatorial aspirant and power in the party was arrayed against Sam Rabston, a protégé of Thomas Taggart the former chairman of the Democratic national committee. Galling under the yoke of Taggartism, the party had split into three factions, the weaker one supporting Marshall. On the fourth ballot Marshall was nominated the other two factions having fought themselves to death and having had agreed on him as a compromise candidate. It was an incident that he was nominated and today he smiles as he speaks of the sudden turn in the tide of men. Marshall began work at once. He harmonized the party, he began a whirlwind speaking campaign, he took advantage of a split in the ranks of the opposition and he turned the state to his standards by a majority of 16,000.

Marshall is a Cleveland Democrat in every sense, holding pronounced and well known views on the right of states and the tariff. As an executive he has been a fair and impartial. He has applied business principles to the state's affairs. In private life he stands for all that is clean and moral. He never takes a drink—but he says this is only his personal view, and advocates personal liberty with a big "C." In word Tom Marshall governor is Tom Marshall, country lawyer, now as then a "live wire."

PITTSBURG MEN HAVE PURCHASED THE STOCK

Purchase Holdings of Janesville Men in the Owen Thomas Motor Car Company.

George Toner, representing a trio of Pittsburgh capitalists, who own and control the Wisconsin Engine company at Corlies, Wisconsin, and also several large rolling mills in the east, have purchased all the stock of the Janesville men who have been interested in the Owen Thomas Motor Car company. The deal was made in Chicago last Friday, M. G. Jeffrie representing the Janesville stockholders. Some thirty thousand dollars that had been invested in the concern already, together with interest and expenses were included in the check handed Mr. Jeffrie and was disbursed today to the various local stockholders.

Mr. Owen Thomas stated this morning that the new company, which was immediately reorganized, would for the present retain the name of the old corporation but that the car would be manufactured in Corlies, Wisconsin, where the others interested had large shops. Mr. Owen Thomas said that he expected to begin active operations for the construction of cars for the 1931 market and would immediately establish a permanent headquarters in Corlies although he would of necessity be in Janesville for some three months yet until plans for the new factory were completed.

The new company has been capitalized at a half million dollars and Mr. Owen Thomas has been given the privilege of underwriting half of that amount, all stock subscribed by the fourth of the present month being taken up by Toner and his associates. It is expected a special factory building will be constructed at Corlies and all parts, including the engine and furnishing for the cars, be made there.

HALLOWE'EN DAMAGE WAS NOT EXTENSIVE

Police Patrol Wagon Horse Was Severely Suffered—No Arrests Were Made.

"Boh", the police patrol wagon horse, voted Halloween a big nuisance. He was nearly run off his feet responding to telephone calls Saturday evening. "Yorn" Murdoch handled the calls. "Though many gangs of very husky 'spirits' were routed and chased by the officers, no arrests were made nor were any boys taken to station. Some of the ghostly manifestations were as follows:

John Nash's board sidewalk on Chatham street turned upside down. Second ward school bell kept ringing for a considerable period. Rainschickie fence in the First ward torn down.

Some sections of small sized sewer pipe broken.

Electric globes unceremoniously carried away from porch of a Washington street residence.

LYRIC THEATRE REAR WALL WAS WRECKED

Heavy Rain Last Evening Undermined "Green" Masonry—Loss May Total $400.

If the Hamill had attached an over-trough to the rear end of the new extension of the Hamilton Richardson estate building on West Milwaukee street, as he ought to have done, a small Niagara created by the heavy rainfall would not have undermined the "green" masonry and caused a $300 to $400 brick wall to slump down into a defunct heap of wreckage sometime during the night. It was enough to make the contractor sick at heart—the slight which met their eyes when they visited the site this morning and prepared to complete the operations of remodeling the store-building, which the Lyric moving picture theatre is to occupy. The wreck was so complete that every piece of the foundation stone and every brick will have to be re-laid. It rained steadily during the night and the water, in this instance, was collected on a 100 foot incline.

THE HEAVENS IN NOVEMBER.

By Professor Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.

Eclipse of the Moon. Venus now the brightest object in the sky. Halley's comet approaching rapidly.

So many of the bright winter stars have now entered the evening sky that the eastern heavens already present a brilliant appearance. The striking group Taurus is nearly half way to the zenith, while below this Orion, the most magnificent constellation of all, and Gemini, with its two bright twin stars, are entering the evening sky together. The Great Square of Pegasus shines out high up in the south, the large, rather faint Andromeda, with its wonderful nebula, is exactly overhead, and in the north the Great Dipper is again just beginning its upward climb around the pole.

THE AUTUMN STARS.
The beautiful Milky Way extends through the zenith from east to west, but the greater part of its wonderful summer branch, with the striking groups of Sagittarius and the Scorpion, has disappeared. The bright group of the Eagle is, however, still conspicuous in the southwest, and above this is the beautiful Northern Cross, which is now approaching an upright position. Following further along the "Golden Pathway" we come next to the bright Cassiopeia, nearly overhead; then to the most interesting group Perseus, and finally to Andromeda, with its very brilliant white star Capella.

The possessor of a small telescope will find many most beautiful star clusters in this region. There is one in Cassiopeia, at E, nearly midway between the stars L and R, which contains stars of many magnitudes, area somewhat less than a quarter as large as that occupied by the full moon.

During the month the observer will have several opportunities to watch the falling away of the wonderful Demon Star, at K, which, at a constant interval of about 2 days 21 hours, has three-fourths of its light cut off by a large, dark star, which is revolving around it. The total time occupied in the stars darkening and afterward regaining its original brightness is about nine hours. It will be at its faintest this month, November 11, midnight; November 17, 9 P. M., and November 20, 6 P. M. (Eastern standard time). The other eclipses occur in daylight and are, hence, invisible to us.

THE PLANETS.
If the observer will look toward the southwest soon after sunset, he cannot fail to notice the beautiful planet Venus, which is now very much the brightest object in the sky. It is still low down in the heavens and sets as early as about 7 P. M., but on November 6 its upward motion among the stars will begin, and it will then become more conspicuous. It reaches its greatest distance east of the sun on December 2, so that on the last few days of the month it is in the best position for observation. Although so bright now, its brightness will steadily increase during the remainder of the year.

On November 16 the narrow crescent moon will be seen just west of Venus, the two bodies forming a beautiful picture. On this evening the moon passes so close to the planet that from some parts of the earth it will be seen to hide Venus from view. But the occultation does not occur until 11 P. M. (Eastern time), and cannot be seen by observers in the United States.

Mars and Saturn are both high up in the south and in excellent position for observation. Mars is growing rapidly fainter as it draws away from the earth, but the larger markings can still be clearly seen in a small telescope. The polar cap is at present so small that it may, perhaps, only be detected with difficulty. As shown in Fig. 1, the rapid eastward motion of Mars has begun, so that the two planets are again drawing together. Mars will pass to the east of Saturn on December 31. Jupiter and Mercury are now morning stars.

HALLEY'S COMET.
This brilliant, naked-eye comet, which during the past 20 centuries has appeared in the sky every 76 years, was rediscovered on its present expected return on September 11. It was then in the direction of the point A, Fig. 1, exactly in the position predicted by computation. In its regular motion along its great path, 3,300,000,000 of miles long, it was be a striking and magnificent object. The earth will probably pass through the tail of this comet on May 18.

then more than 360,000,000 of miles from the earth, and was, hence, exceedingly faint and only to be detected in the very largest telescopes or by photography. As it draws rapidly nearer the earth its apparent

No special effect will be produced by this encounter.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.
The full moon will pass into the earth's shadow in the early morning of November 27. It will reach the motion among the stars increases; on November 1 it will be at B, Fig. 1, and on January 1 at D.

During the present month it is still so far away that it will be visible only in the largest telescopes. By the end of next January it will probably become visible to the naked eye, remaining in the evening sky in the west until March 23. After this date it must be looked for in the early morning sky, where it remains near the sun until May 18, when it again enters the evening sky, and in the point A, Fig. 1, and the eclipse begin at 2 hours 11 minutes A. M.; it will reach the point B and the eclipse become total at 3 hours 14 minutes A. M. Its center will be at the point C, and the total eclipse end at 4 hours 35 minutes, and finally it will reach D and the entire eclipse be over at 4 hours 23 minutes A. M. (Eastern time), the duration thus being 3 hours 27 minutes. The appearance of the partially eclipsed moon at various times is shown in Fig. 5.

rely only upon these pyrotechnics, but he has also arranged for enormous strips of white cloth—150 yards long and four yards wide—to be placed outside the chief towns, and all pointing to Manchester. Each strip will bear a number indicating the town, and by it will stand a man with a flag. They will be useful in case Mr. Cady gets blown out of his course, and for that reason they are mostly placed to the northeast of the projected route.

EXTENSION LEG ON LADDER

How Painter or Other Mechanic Can Arrange Support to Reach Out-of-Way Places.

A painter or any other mechanic is sometimes called upon to paint or repair work which is very unhandy to reach. Perhaps a ladder is to be supported in some manner upon a slanting roof of a shed, or other building, writes I. G. Bayley in Scientific American. Such a case happened very recently, when the following scheme was adopted by a mechanic with success:

A ladder, A, was supported from the peak of the shed roof by means of a plate, B, bent in the shape of a hook. Two painter's hooks would do just as well. The plate, B, was about eight or ten inches wide and three feet six inches long before being bent. The grip on the roof peak should not be less than six or eight inches. The second or working ladder, C, was supported on the first ladder, A, by an extension leg, D, made of four by three timber of tough quality. The foot of this leg, D, was shaped as shown in detail to fit against the rounds of the ladder on the roof. A plate, E, furnished with a number of holes for a couple of U bolts, F, was screwed down on the leg, D. Two holes were staggered, and spaced 2 1/2 inches apart on each side, allowing adjustment of 1 1/2 inch each way, to accommodate different pitch of roofs. The distance apart of each group of holes in the plate, E, should equal the distance apart of rounds of the ladder, usually one foot, so that the rounds of the ladder will bear on the U bolts, which should be drawn up tight when the proper adjustment has been made.

If the extension leg was made of steel, of smaller dimension than the timber one, furnished with a sharp point, G, to stick in the shingles of the roof, the ladder, A, and hook, B, could be dispensed with.

Americans Lead in Flour.

The mills of the United States every year export more flour than all the rest of the mills in the world produce.

MAY SUCCEED CRANE AS AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVE IN CHINA.
Ex-Governor William M. Dawson.

Washington, D. C.—For the present the case of Charles F. Crane is a closed incident as far as the state department is concerned. The appointment of his successor will be watched with a great deal of interest.

Although the Peckham post has not been raised to the dignity of an embassy, nevertheless there is no more important place in the diplomatic service at this time. As a matter of fact, St. Petersburg, Vienna, Berlin and the other capitals of the European powers happen to be of secondary importance just now on account of the stupendous political game that is being played in the far east.

Consequently, it is highly essential for the United States to be represented at Peckham by a man of consummate tact and ability.

Among those mentioned for the post is the present charge d'affaires at Peckham, Mr. Henry P. Fletcher, whose work at this post has been most gratifying to the state department, John Hayes Hammond, now with the president as a traveling companion, has been offered the post but turned it down on the ground that it required too much sacrifice of personal interest for him to undertake unless it became absolutely necessary. It may be that the president can at this time make Mr. Hammond see that it is necessary.

Oregon has also been offered the post. The last national figure to enter the field as a prospective diplomat for this troublesome post is ex-Governor William M. O. Dawson of West Virginia. Mr. Dawson is a staunch backer of President Taft and it is owing to the active part taken in the Republican national convention when he swung the entire state delegation to Taft, that his friends are urging his appointment.

Mr. Dawson is a lawyer by profession. He is a self-made man and possesses rare insight into international problems. He has just passed the half century mark in life and if appointed, his friends say, would acquit himself with honors.

His Troubles O'er.

"I have been sad and gloomy and not like myself this evening, I have a very good excuse for it," replied the hardware drummer when called on his low spirits. "I had a brother Bill, and brother Bill is no more."

"Anything peculiar about your brother Bill?" was asked.

"There was, Bill was a football player. He was a champion. He held more medals than any other living kicker. He had more broken backs and legs and arms than any in westerns. He had a standing contract with an undertaker and a hospital, and he had burial plots in four different cemeteries. There is no mistake that brother Bill played the game for all it was worth."

"And he is no more?"

"As I said, his kicking is over, but what saddens me is the way he suffered before the end came. He got married about a year ago and the inevitable came. He dreamed of a game and kicked his wife out of bed and she got a divorce. He had retired from football, but he couldn't pass a dog without kicking him. He kicked his bedstead to pieces at least once a week. He kicked open doors and gates, and he kicked in the heads of barrels. He kicked the grocer and butcher and baker, and it got to that pass where something had to be done."

"And he was restrained?"

"Yes, you might call it that. Some day when he was kicked filled an old peach can with dynamite, and put it in his wife. Bill saw it and was a half-back once more. He took a run and a kick to send that can to the North Pole, and there was an explosion, that shook the earth for a mile around."

"And then they gathered up the fragments?"

"Oh, no. There were no fragments. The explosion simply found Bill's right leg so that he could kick no more, and he has to go on suffering for six months before death finally came. None of us will ever know his feelings when a dog would run up and sniff of his leg, or a made would come along and challenge him to a match. I am sad, and, and the only consolation is in knowing that if Bill was shouted off to the wrong place when he died he wasn't 15 minutes kicking himself into the right one."

Kidnapped children form a picture taken especially for this paper after their identification in Chicago, Viviano children.

Chicago, Ill.—Search for the kidnapers of Grace and Thomas Viviano of St. Louis the children found on Thursday in Chicago, is going on all over the United States.

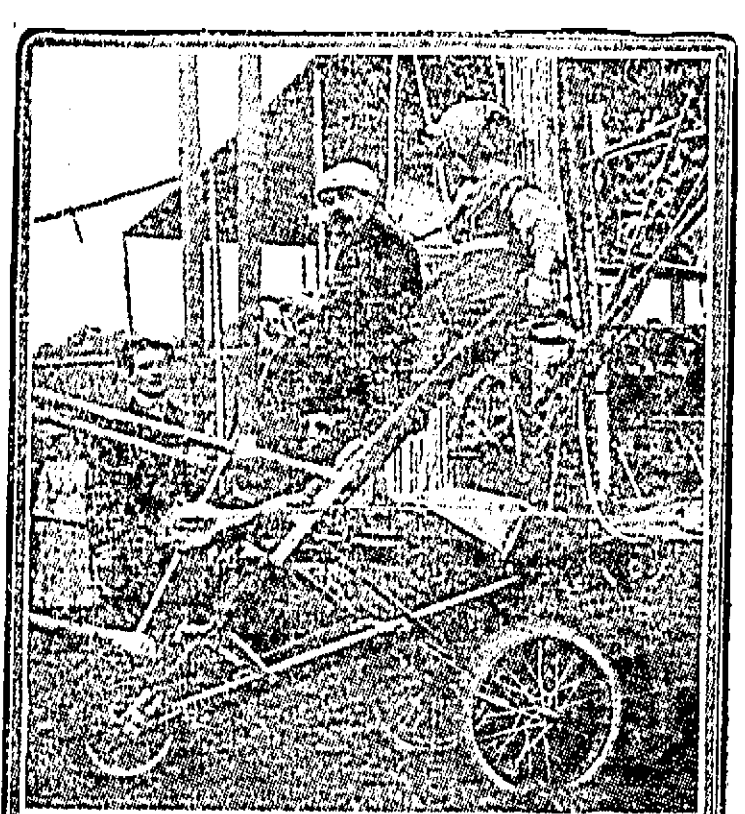

Inspector P. D. O'Brien of the East Chicago avenue police station, in whose district the kidnapped children were found and held more than a day before their identity was discovered, has begun an investigation to fix the blame for detection of duty on the part of some of his subordinates.

The fact that the children, who are comely were held for 24 hours before Inspector O'Brien was told that they had been found and that they might be the Viviano children, admittedly gave the kidnapers an excellent start on the police.

The little folks were picked up the girl first, when she ran up to Mrs. Anna Venzel, who was standing on her porch at 1332 Larrabee street and the boy a little later at Larrabee street and North avenue, where two boys found him crying.

The police have one clew upon which they are working. They believe an Italian named Samuel Turrist and three other men did the kidnaping.

Aviator to try for world's distance record.

S. F. Cody in his biplane and his wife, who holds the distinction of being the first lady to "fly" in England.

London.—The most spectacular event of aviation week, in which all Europe is interested is the proposed trip of England's foremost aviator from London to Manchester, a distance of 197 miles. Last Saturday at Doncaster while rounding a turn, his biplane ground and was damaged, but this will be required in a few days and then Mr. Cody will start on his trip, which if successful will break all world's records for distance in a straight line.

In order that the aviator may not lose his way in the air he has arranged that specially constructed colored balloons shall be sent up at various points along the easterly route which is the one Mr. Cody hopes to follow. The balloons are so made that they explode at an altitude of 300 feet (Mr. Cody expects to fly at not less than 500 feet) and they emit a dense volume of red smoke, at the same time releasing a small parachute with a red flag attached. Should Mr. Cody pass through one of these clouds of red smoke both he and his machine will be dyed that color. He does not

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, November 1, 1869.—Serious Accident.—This afternoon, while Mrs. Daniel Wilcox was out riding in a covered buggy in company with a lady friend, the vehicle was upset and both ladies thrown out. Mrs. Wilcox had three or four ribs broken and a shoulder dislocated and her companion's face was somewhat bruised. It was a severe accident.

Resignation of Prof. O. R. Smith.—Prof. Smith's resignation took effect today and is the general theme of remark and regret among parents, teachers and pupils. The schools have never been so fully attended nor so well taught and disciplined as they have been under his supervision, and his resignation must be regarded as a serious blow to the educational interests of the city. Mr. Smith has been regarded by teachers as one of the leading educators in the State. He has been President of the Wisconsin Teachers' Association, and one of the Board of three Examiners of "Teachers of eminent qualifications" and holds his appointment from the Superintendent of Public Instruction. Since his engagement here he has had numerous very tempting offers from Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, and Chicago, all promising more pecuniary compensation than he was receiving here, but preferring to remain in Janesville, he refused them all. He has already made an engagement and will enter upon a new field of labor immediately, but we are glad to say that he will remain in the city.

Jottings.—The little building opposite the Court Street Methodist church, is among the oldest in the city. It was the first store in town, kept by a Mr. Polton, who is now a resident of Fort Atkinson, we think. A countryman ate three pounds and a half of fresh fried pork in a restaurant on Main street, last Saturday. Rev. Mr. Dodge and Mr. J. H. Crosby have gone to St. Louis to attend a national Sunday School Convention.

JERSEY LILY.

Mr. Brown (to new cook)—What is your name?
Cook—Mary, sir.
Mr. Brown—Dear me, that is my wife's name. We shall have to call you something else.
Cook—Never mind, call me Lily!

HAS THE BOY MONARCH OF EUROPE AT LAST AWAKENED?

He Was Glad.

But turned away from the front of the paper office when he found that the show thing at him, for a matter of time he also said:
"You have got on to my curve. I turned aside to look at the base of the tower, forgetting that the games were over for the season. For a while, I had a hundred friends. When they closed I had only one. I had called them all back and had them over for a while and they couldn't stand it."
"You were an enthusiast?" queried the other.
"Yes, I lived on it. I ate and slept with it. Every morning I made a hat and every evening I found I had lost it. When the games began last spring I had a hundred friends. When they closed I had only one. I had called them all back and had them over for a while and they couldn't stand it."
"It gets in the blood,"
"You bet, I couldn't think of anything but baseball all day, and at night I dreamed of it and cried out in my sleep. My wife refused to discuss the game, and the relations between us were strained. One servant girl refused to argue and I discharged her. My father-in-law said there was no game like poker and I insulted him. On Sunday, when there was no game, the day seemed a year long to me. The loss of it would be to me as great as a year. I would cut it out, and I told him he was no partner."

"But it's all over now."
"Yes, and I'm glad of it. In another month I can get over thinking about it and turn to something else, and before the winter is over perhaps I can get in to see Shakespeare at New York. I may have to get out into the West and get some more of the game. I shall do it as gently as I can, and without threatening to shoot any other fellow's head off."

A SOLID REASON.

Mr. Smith—Why do you women want to vote? Don't you know that the majority of the women don't want you to?
Mrs. Smith—That's exactly why we are determined to do it—the way!

Talks on Snake Culture

No. 37—The Old Nineteen

In the chapel of a Southern penitentiary over three hundred convicts gathered on a recent Sunday, and the pastor made a rousing good talk about John Barleycorn. "Old John won't trouble you much while you are in this institution," said he, "but he will be laying for you when your imprisonment is ended, and you go out doors for a few breaths of the pure air of freedom. If you don't sidestep him then, he will have most of you back here again. I wonder how many of you men were helped into this beautiful ful jail by old John Barleycorn? Those of you who were assisted by him will please stand up." All but nineteen stood up. There were actually nineteen out of more than three hundred prisoners who didn't owe anything to your friend Barleycorn. The latter was probably pained and shocked when he heard about it, and he will be more industrious than ever hereafter. He likes to have a hand in every imprisonment in jail or bar factory, and it worries him a good deal when he misses connections. Old John is the great road builder; he is always constructing admirable turnpikes, to make traveling easy, and he takes great care to see that there is a jail, or a padded cell, or a cheap but substantial grave at the end of every road. Many of his favorite boulevards bring up at the penitentiary, and it grieves him sorely when the old nineteen elect to try other routes.
